Monthly Comment

European markets ended August marginally higher, with the Stoxx Europe 600 up 0.49% (net return), in a month of thin summer liquidity, sharp rate moves and persistent geopolitical uncertainty. The dominant driver was a global bond rout: sticky inflation, heavy AI-related debt supply and hawkish Fed minutes, revealing that several officials had favored a July hike, pushed the US 30-year yield to its highest level since 2007 and the 10-year to 4.75%, with markets pricing in meaningful odds of a September hike. The US-Iran standoff intensified as President Trump threatened an "economic D-Day" against Tehran, and Iran threatened to halt all oil exports, keeping oil prices supported for most of the month. The AI/momentum complex suffered another violent unwind mid-month, dragging down semiconductors and memory names, before partially stabilizing on Nvidia's bullish multi-year outlook. However, second-quarter earnings remained very supportive overall, helping the markets to edge up.
In this context, ELEVA European Selection was up 0.47% vs an index up 0.49%, an underperformance of 2 bps.

Sector allocation had a slightly positive impact, thanks to the overweight in materials as well as the underweight in consumer staples and in real estate. Conversely, the overweight in utilities as well as the underweight in information technology and in communication services had a negative impact on performance. Stock picking was slightly negative, particularly in technology, communication services and consumer staples.
Anglo American was well supported and followed copper prices higher this month. Energy names like Galp Energia were in demand in light of the geopolitical context. Enzyme maker Novonesis upgraded its guidance, resumed share buy backs and convinced investors of its long-term prospects. Banks continued their successful run; ABN Amro's results were well received and showed strong cost discipline along with better net interest income.
French stocks underperformed, investors started to reflect political risk and deteriorating debt fundamentals. Engie, Société Générale and Orange underperformed this month, despite publishing good results. There was also some profit-taking on Coca Cola HBC after a good run. Straumann fell after the CEO announced their departure.
Regarding our proprietary macroeconomic indicators, the ELEVA Capital Index Europe (ECI) is still pointing upwards, as is the ECI China. The ECI Global is stabilizing at a high level. The impact of the Middle East conflict looks limited, growth expectations are likely to improve. In this context, companies should have strong earnings growth. The main risk would be a spike in yields. We note that corporates remain active in mergers and acquisitions and share buybacks.
Value and cyclicals were at 48.9% and 65.8% of the fund respectively.

Since inception, ELEVA European Selection is up 133.07% vs an index up 125.58%, an outperformance of 749 bps.
