Monthly Comment

European markets ended August marginally higher, with the Stoxx Europe 600 up 0.49% (net return) and the Stoxx Europe Small 200 up 2.30% (net return), enabling Small caps to outperform large caps since the beginning of the year (+13.1% vs 12.2%). August was a month of thin summer liquidity, sharp upward rate moves, persistent geopolitical uncertainty and a further sharp unwind in AI and momentum stocks mid-month. Despite this environment, second-quarter earnings remained supportive overall, and European equities continued to benefit from positive investor inflows.
In this context, ELEVA Leaders Small & Mid Cap Europe was up 1.86%, slightly underperforming the Stoxx Europe Small 200.

Sector allocation had a slightly positive impact, thanks to the underweight in real estate as well as the overweight in energy and consumer discretionary while the underweight in communication services and materials as well as the overweight in technology suffered. European earning results season ended on a positive note with good release from Kingspan Group, GEA Group and SBM Offshore that were rewarded. On the negative side, Straumann Holding suffered despite good results and upgraded guidance following its CEO transition. Other medtech companies were also under pressure despite no specific negative news flow.
In August, exposure to French stocks was further reduced to an underweight versus the benchmark (whereas it was in line in July), given the uncertainties surrounding the budget vote and the 2027 election.

Since inception, ELEVA Leaders Small & Mid Cap Europe is up 64.03% versus an index up 82.89%, an underperformance of 1 886 bps.
