Risk profile

1	2	3	4	5	6	7

Low risk → High risk

The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that investors might lose money because of market developments or because the product provider is unable to pay. We have classified this product as 3 out of 7, which represents a medium-low risk class. The risk indicator assumes you keep the product for 4 years. This risk classification is justified by the fact that the fund strategies are specifically designed to minimize drawdowns and control volatility over time, resulting in a relatively moderate overall risk profile.
The SRRI reflects past volatility and is not a reliable guide to future risk. It does not capture all risks, such as credit risk, liquidity risk or extreme market events. Because this product is not protected against future market performance, you may lose all or part of your investment. The product may be exposed to other risks, such as operational, political, legal and counterparty risks, which are not reflected in the Summary Risk Indicator. For a complete overview of the risks associated with this sub-fund, please refer to the risk section of the prospectus.

Manager's comments

September was a month in which the market was handed a reason to move in both directions and completed neither. The first session set the tone: US Central Command confirmed new strikes on Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps targets in Iran, Brent closed sharply higher, bond yields rose on inflation worries and the S&P 500 fell. Two sessions later the index took the whole of that loss back and more, rising 1.06% on 3 September. The following morning the August payroll report arrived far above consensus, short-dated yields jumped, futures began to price a quarter-point increase at the September meeting, and the market handed part of the gain back. That pattern set the month. The VIX reached its monthly high of 17.84 on 10 September and did nothing with it. On 16 September the Federal Reserve raised its target range by a quarter point, its first increase since 2023, stocks gave up their early gains during the press conference, and the index closed near 7,552, its low of the month. Three sessions later it was back near 7,765. On 22 September, with reports that Iran had offered to reopen the Strait of Hormuz within a week and oil falling for a fifth day, the index closed flat and the VIX set its low at 14.21. The month ended at -0.45%, with volatility back at 16.34, exactly where it had opened.

Impact on ENIGMA Strategies

ENIGMA returned +0.56% in September and closed at a Class A NAV of 102.91. The index is context here and not a benchmark the fund is managed against, but the two paths belong side by side. The fund's monthly low of 101.72 came on 2 September, while the geopolitical premium was still being repriced, and the high of 103.07 was on 22 September, the session in which the index itself stalled. More of the fund's sessions closed lower than higher, and the month still finished up. That is the signature of a range rather than a trend: the losing sessions were small and the winning ones larger, and the mean-reversion overlays that produced most of the return were paid by prices that overshot inside the session and came back. This is the friction the models are calibrated on. Posture through the month was defensive, with elevated liquidity held deliberately. That liquidity preserves the capacity to step in when the risk-return balance improves and it is a drag whenever the market runs. New hedges were added during the month, at a cost, into a volatility index that never once suggested stress was close.

The verdict is short. A market that starts a move each week and unwinds it before the next one begins offers no narrative and no visible progress, but it does offer repeatable dislocations, and the process took a modest amount out of them. Frequent reversals of that kind also force the volatility measures to switch position and then switch straight back, and those false starts are a cost the systems are built to carry rather than evidence that they have failed. Protection is built before it is needed, and when the stress does not arrive it is a cost; in September it was mostly a cost, and the month absorbed it. Nothing in the month changed the reason the fund exists. The models remain positioned for two-way conditions in which prices overshoot and correct, and for the deployment of liquidity when the risk-return balance warrants it.

Investment Policy

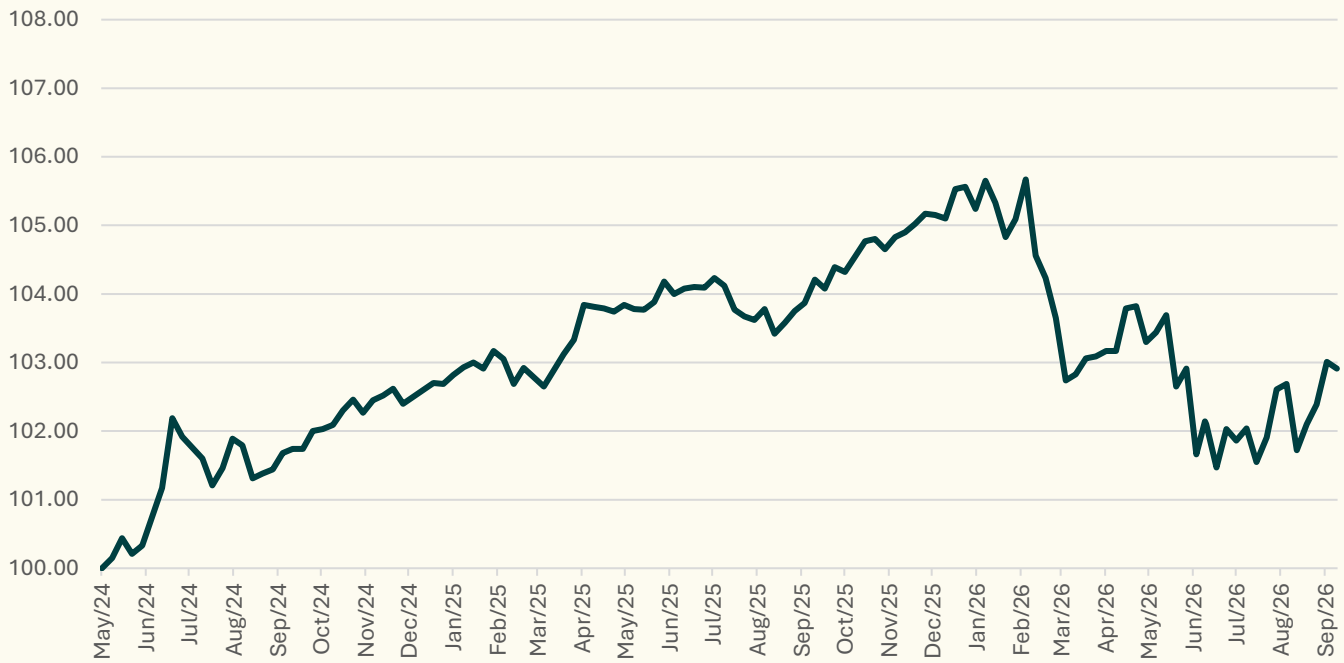

The ENIGMA Legacy Fund is designed to protect and grow invested capital across all market environments, with a strong and consistent focus on risk management. Capital preservation is at the core of the fund's philosophy, with particular attention paid to controlling drawdowns and limiting the volatility of returns.

Returns are generated through proprietary, disciplined, and rules-based investment strategies. This systematic approach enables the fund to respond swiftly and consistently to changing market conditions, reducing reliance on discretionary decision-making. By managing the portfolio in a structured manner, the fund aims to achieve more stable performance, lower overall risk, and faster recovery from market setbacks compared to traditional buy-and-hold strategies.

The fund primarily implements a low-risk equity strategy with clearly defined and understood risks. In addition, the ENIGMA Legacy Fund may invest in money market instruments, debt securities, UCITS funds (including exchange-traded funds), actively managed certificates, derivatives, as well as sight and time bank deposits. This flexible investment universe supports effective risk diversification and liquidity management.

What distinguishes the ENIGMA Legacy Fund is its combination of low volatility, limited drawdowns, and solid long-term performance. Its low correlation to equity markets allows the fund to generate positive returns across different market cycles, regardless of market direction. As a result, the market-independent nature of the strategy makes the ENIGMA Legacy Fund a valuable building block within a balanced and well-diversified investment portfolio, aimed at delivering consistent long-term value for investors.
